

In September 1777, the Second Continental Congress left Philadelphia after the city is captured by the British. They make their way to York, and stayed until June 1778.